from "COUNTRY LIGHT" Publication of Cent. Va. Elec. Lovingston, Virginia

Appomattox County, one of the counties served by Central Virginia Electric Cooperative, has many claims to fame. "The Gentlemen's Peace" made April 9, 1865 at Old Appomattox Courthouse in the parlor of Wilmer McLean, reunited America and set the stage for the modern era of world leadership. Before and since that event there are great dates to remember, great leaders to salute, but, this is a story of Joe Sweeney.

Joe Sweeney invented the five-string banjo and is the recognized originator of American Minstrelsy. His international fame carried him to command performance for Queen Victoria in England and won companions such as Dan Emmett, author of Dixie. And, the Banjo lives on as one of the greatest musical instruments. He belongs in everyone's musical hall of fame.

Joel Walker Sweeney was born in 1810, alongside the Appomattox River, in what was then Buckingham County. Appomattox did not become a county until 1845. His parents owned a sizeable plantation and a mill but Joe had dreams of music. In 1831 he invented what some say is the only major musical instrument ever created in America. He did it by adding a fifth, or thumb string, to a crude "ban-jar" brought by the Negro from Africa, and by adding the control mechanism from the violin and then he showed the world what could be done with the classical product of his genius. Gifted as an actor, he was a ventriloquist, bird mimic, comedian and dancer. He could stage a fabulous one-man show, but he did not have to, for his brother, Sam and Dick Sweeney had tremendous talent and soon Sweeney had a troupe touring from New York to Texas. Joe was a craftsman with the violin and also a composer who contributed many original songs.

Alas, Joe died October 20, 1860, just before the Civil War started. Dick died shortly thereafter, but Sam carried on the musical heritage and became the favorite of Confederate General J. E. B. Stuart, and Gen. Robert E. Lee visited Stuart's camp and said . . . "such fine music." Sam Sweeney died a year before the War ended, but not before the North had decided that music was a potent factor in war and organized over six hundred bands to provide the troops with music.

Joe is buried in a family plot, his gravesite modestly marked, thanks to the interest and efforts of Col. George H. Collins, a banjo enthusiast, who tracked down many Sweeney documents, playbills and treasured relics. The writer has a violin autographed by a member of the original Sweeney band. And the original banjo is in the Los Angeles, California County Museum. Joe's banjo became so popular he gave it to a Baltimore instrument maker, F. J. Henning, to make copies and when Henning died in California his family gave it to the famous Museum. Many of us wish it possible to return it to Central Virginia that Appomattox might supplement its McLean House with an American Folk Museum. But, that would take a lot of doing.

Joe's banjo, the Sweeney cabin still stands; the birthplace and gravesite of one of our greatest composers and musical inventors repose quietly here in Central Virginia and whenever you listen to a five-stringer, whenever you hear Old Dan Tucker, Lorena or the great songs of yesterday, remember that "music hath charms" and Sweeney, of Appomattox was right up there with the greats of all time.

Sweeney enthusiasts hope for erection of a historical marker on Route 26 opposite the Sweeney homesites and gravesite. This well-traveled highway is within sight of such National Park Service attractions as the restored Old Appomattox Courthouse Village and Courthouse, the remains of the tulip poplar tree where Gen. Lee's Farewell Address was read to his Army, Lee's last Camp, Gen. Grant's Headquarters, and an attractive picnic area is in walking distance at the recently enlarged bridge over the Appomattox River. Many history-minded friends in Lynchburg have helped assemble the Sweeney material, the banjo is still going strong, and when we hear the current slogan "Virginia Is For Lovers" that surely includes lovers of "such fine music" and holds promise that Central Virginia will cooperate to memorialize this valuable shrine and historic attraction.

How It Used To Be In Appomattox

Stuart Farrar, of Pamplin, happened upon a shelf of Lynchburg directories among the records in the court house, Lynchburg. In the oldest directory there, 1887-1888 he found several pages of interesting information about this county back when "Rose Bower", "Nebraska", "Reedy Springs" etc. were post office locations. 'Nebraska", of course was the present county seat, the Town of Appomattox. Population in 1887 was 10,080 with 5,153 white and 4,927 colored. County seat was listed as Appomattox CH (the old village, now Appomattox Court House National Historical Park) with a population of 100.

Average assessed value of lands in 1887-1888 was $4.13 per acre. The Circuit Court of the Fifth Circuit met on the 15th of March and 15th of Sept. with Judge John D. Horsley and George T. Peers as clerk.

Henry T. Parish was county judge and Mr. Peers serving as clerk and County Court met at the Court House Thursday after the 1st Monday in each month.

County officers 84 years ago were T. B. Bryant, sheriff; A.S. Dunn, surveyor, J. H. Franklin, Treasurer; George W. Abbitt, commissioner of the revenue and W. C. Franklin, commonwealth's attorney.

The supervisor board, then as now, was composed of three representatives, one from each district: Wm. White was chairman that board in 1887. D. H. Marshall and H. E. Gilliam.

County magistrates were A. Woodcock, C. H. Gilliam, Pamplin City; Jas. A. Walker, Tower Hill; N. W. Owen, Oakville; C. A. Burkwell, Jr., Ford; Austin, C.H, Bloxton, Reedy Spring; Charles T. Moses, Nebraska (community, not present county Appomattox . . . . the "Depot."

There were nine attorneys within the county at that time: T. S. Bocock, Tower Hill; J. P. L. Fleshman, Chap; W. C. Franklin and E. R. Woodson, Pamplin City and in the village of Appomattox Court House: H.D. Flood, H. T. Parish, R. B. Poore and C. H. Sackett.

An iron mine at Nutall was listed and the Merrill & Ford concern in Pamplin City, as "Pipe Manufacturers - Smoking."

Looking out for the peoples' health were physicians "A through W": Drs. W.H. Abbitt H. C. Babcock, E. H. Grigg, W. N. Horsley, C. S. Morton, R. A. North, J. Randolph, D. Mott Robertson, D. P. Robertson, B. S. Vawter and William White.

Three gentlemen were listed as saddle and harnessmakers; Edward Mayberry at Spring Mills; Peter Pendleton, Pamplin City and Thomas A. Smith Appomattox C. H.

For supplies of "Sassafras Oil" there were R. F. Burke and Co., Nebraska; John P. Hughes, Oakville and J. B. Merryman, Appomattox C. H.

Miss Bettie Johns, Hixburg, was listed under "Schools, Colleges, Etc." together with the notation that "there are 26 white and 15 colored public schools in this county with C. H. Childton, Spout Spring, as superintendent.

Two tanners plied their trade; John W. Harwood, Pamplin City and Henry Layne, Tower Hill. Four undertakers were listed as well as five dealers in wool.

A list of 'Principal Farmers' consumes an entire page in the old directory -. These farmers are listed from the communities of Appomattox C. H., Bent Creek, Chap. Evergreen Fore's Store, Hixburg, Mineral and Nebraska.

And so the old records go on . . . an interesting account of people and communities right here . . . 'right" long ago.

A penny stamp no doubt could "send the word" to any of the county's SEVENTEEN post offices: Appomattox C. H., Bent Creek, Chap, Evergreen, Fore's Store, Hixburg, Mineral, Nebraska, Oakville, Old Pilot, Pamplin City, Reedy Springs, Rose Bower, Spanish Oaks, Spout Spring, Spring Mills, Tower Hill.

Almost any one of us might like to have some of those stalwart farmers, merchants and other professional men and women among us again, but who can truly say that "they were the good old days." Speaking editorially, of course, THESE are the GOOD DAYS even if one doesn't particularly like frozen dinners or some of the current TV offerings . . . Penicillin, jet travel, air conditioning, modern automobiles, Rescue Squads, radio stereophonic sound and and pant suited comfort for the women are only a few of the many blessings of 1971. Anyone care to argue about that?

Many trades and professions were represented in those days. There were thirteen coach and wagonmakers, two dentists, eleven "Distillers', two druggists, two florists and twenty-four merchants offering "General Merchandise' . Four hotels served the county: D. W. Gills, Pamplin City; R. B. Harvey, Spring Mills, J. Walton McKinney, Appomattox Court House and J. R. Alwood, Nebraska.

Land Agents included Dr. W. A. Hoseley, Mineral and A.B. White and Co., Bent Creek. Farmers could have their corn and flour ground at any one of thirteen mills, including mills operated or owned by A. F. Anderson, Appomattox C. H. J.J. Carson, Spanish Oaks; J. J. Carson and Bro., Oakville; J.R. Franklin and Willis Ligon & Sons, Pamplin City; W. Hancock, Nebraska. There were at least two mills at Spring Mills — T. W. Harvey and W. W. and J. Henrick. W. D. Hix had a mill at Hixburg. In the Tower Hill community, J. Walton Johnson had a mill as did J. C. Meggenson and Albert Thornhill. A. A. White and Co. had a mill at Bent Creek.

Millwork - sawing and planing could be done at Spring Mills, Bent Creek, Tower Hill, Fore's Store (by J. H. Forbes). Also, Evergreen Spring Mills, Tower Hill, Chap, Oakville, Mineral, Hixburg and Spanish Oaks. L. L. Tolley, Pamplin City, was listed as a "Millwright."

'Last Day Of Summer'

Monday was the "last day of summer" so far as swimmers and sun-bathers at the Falling River Country Club were concerned and they really took advantage of it! The olympic-size pool opened for the season Memorial Day and closed on Monday, Labor Day, ending with a delightful picnic supper for club members and their families. W. W. Blyth (Captain, Virginia State Police, retired) who was pool manager again this year, reports that they have had a very successful summer.

The Raiders then used reserves freely in the fourth quarter as they still kept the visitors under control and they never had any real threat going.

Mike McCormick was the leading ground gainer as he rushed for 68 yards in 15 carries for the Raiders. He had over a 100 in kickoff and punt returns also. Jimmy Chandler, besides kicking extra points, rushed for 40 yards on 10 carries and caught one pass. Bobby Layne was
